

Horseshoe Scout Reservation Backcountry Regulations

In wildernesses, it is crucial to minimize our impact on particularly fragile ecosystems such as mountains, lakes, streams, deserts, and seashores. Since our recreational use varies from one season of the year to the next, we must adjust to these changing conditions as well, to avoid damaging the environment.

The following regulations are enforced to protect the Horseshoe Scout Reservation Wilderness Area for you and future generations:

Low Impact, No Trace camping policies are in effect.

Group Size

To reduce impacts to trails, campsites, other visitors:

- Group size is limited to 15 people

Permits

- Advance reservations are required to use this area.
- At least one person in the group has been formally trained in Leave No Trace policies, and has reviewed these guidelines with all participants. See <http://Int.org>
- Contact the HSR Ranger for designated hard-shelter areas to be used in case of severe weather.

Trails

To protect trail tread and minimize soil erosion:

- Always travel along established trails
- Shortcutting switchbacks is not allowed

Campsites

To reduce impacts to soils, vegetation, wildlife and other visitors and prevent water pollution:

- Except for designated campsites, overnight camping must be located at least 200 feet away from a thruway trail and 200 feet away from streams, creeks or springs
- Camping is not permitted in designated wildlife or ecosystem recovery areas.
- The maximum length of stay by any individual or group is three days (two nights) at one site.
- Temporary camp structures such as racks, tent frames or temporary tables will not be nailed or permanently attached to any trees and must be dismantled after the use period.
- Toilet use must be at least 200 feet from a campsite or water source and out of sight of the trail. Human feces must be buried in a six-inch-deep hole in accordance with Leave No Trace guidelines.
- Wash clothes, dishes, and bodies at least 200 feet from any source of natural water.
- Emphasize the need for minimizing impact on the land through proper camping practices, and for preserving the solitude and quiet of remote areas. Camp at low-use areas; avoid areas that show signs of heavy use.

Refuse

To keep the Wilderness clean and refuse free:

- All trash will be packed out and no garbage will be buried or burned.

Campfires

- Contact the HSR Ranger prior heading to the wilderness areas to verify current fire conditions and that a fire ban is not in effect.
- Open fires are always prohibited except at designated sites. Campfires are permitted only in established fire rings and are to be cleaned at the termination of your stay. Use only wood that is dead and on the ground.
- Use backpacking stoves, particularly where the fuel supply is limited or open fires are restricted. An adult knowledgeable in the use of the stove(s) must supervise. If a fire is necessary, keep it as small as possible and use established fire lays where available in safe areas. After use, erase all signs.
- Cutting or removing standing wood (either dead or alive) is not allowed without permission from an HSR Ranger.

Motorized/mechanized equipment

Primitive tools and means of travel are basic to the Wilderness experience. Use of a motor vehicle and/or motorized equipment in any part of the wilderness area is prohibited.

The use of chainsaws is restricted to operators who are at least 18 years old and have taken and passed the Horseshoe Scout Reservation chainsaw safety training class.

- Use of a bicycles, ATVs, wagons or carts (including game carts) is prohibited

Wildlife

- Do not molest, disturb, or injure the wildlife or their nesting places and habitat. HSR is their home . . . WE are the visitors. Treat wildlife with respect and take precautions to avoid dangerous encounters with wildlife. Leave snakes, bears, ground squirrels, and other wildlife alone.
- When not being consumed or transported, all food and trash must be suspended at least 10 feet off the ground and four feet from the nearest limb or trunk. Cables are provided at established campsites for this purpose.
- The use of salt or food for attracting wildlife is prohibited.

GENERAL

- Respect the quest of others to enjoy the solitude and silence of the backcountry.
- Look at and photograph; never pick or collect.
- Demonstrate respect by taking care of the outdoors. Land stewardship is everyone's responsibility. Do your part to leave wild America for future generations.
